AN AMERICAN SENATOR ABROAD.-It has been known by those gossiping tale bearers, the newspapers, that Senator Douglas has been im-proving the recess of Congress by taking an European tour, and we learn by these same journals, that in a most quiet and unostenta-tious way, he has visited every city of note on the continent. It is a matter of interest to every American citizen, to know how the dy-nasties of the old world look upon and treat such distinguished dignitaries as United States senators, and it is a matter in which all feel a ust pride when proper respect is shown them

n the American name. We have it from those who know that Sena tor Douglas was no obscure personage on the other side of the big waters. On a tour of observation for his own personal improvement, he was looked upon by the countries he visited as perhaps one of the best representatives of American character abroad. He certainly so acquitted himself, as may be seen by the folloing incidents, which we have from an eye witness. On reaching London, he was asked if he would like to see the Oueen?

"Certainly," said the senator.
"Then you will have to be presented in court lress, according to the customs of the realm," said the messenger.

"Then," said the senator, "I prefer not to see her majesty, until I can do so in the same dress that I can visit an American President."

The senator did not see the Queen.

He visited Scotland, Ireland, Italy, and, on his way to Constantinople, visited Smyrna, the day after Koszta was released. There, upon the ground, and in possession of all the facts, h wrote home his views, sustaining the action of Captain Ingraham and the Turkish government. He went to Odessa, and from thence to St. Petersburgh, travelling through 2,600 miles of Russian territory. He sent his card, "Stephen A. Douglas, of Illinois, America," to Count Nesselrode, the emperor's private secre-tary. It was immediately answered by an invitation to meet the count at his private apart ments, and a long and interesting interview was the consequence. On leaving, the count asked Mr. D. if he had seen the emperor.

He said he had not. "When will you leave St. Petersburgh?" aid the count.

"In a very few days," replied the senator.

"I fear, says the count, "you will not have a chance to see the emperor, as he is very busy reviewing his troops, about forty miles from the city, which require him to come in late and to leave early in the morning. I will, however, try to get you an audience." It appears the count acquainted the emperor ith the presence of Mr. D., and the next day the latter received a note from the emperor himself, inviting him to his head quarters near the place of review, stating that he would there be met by his staff and the principal dignitaries of his government in "full dress!" Here the senator was staggered a little, and asked the count if it was expected he was to asked the count it it was expected ne was to adorn his republican person in gold lace. "Not at all," says the count. "A citizen's dress, such as your American President receives his guests in, is all that is required here."

The next morning he set out with the former secretary of the Russian legation at Washington, and with whom Mr. D. had been per-Arrived at a small village where they were to stop, the senator and his attendant stopped at the only hotel and asked for quarters.

They were answered by the landlord, that every room in the house had been taken. "But I must have a room," says the sec tary. "I have an American gentleman with me, Senator Douglas, who is to be presented to the emperor." "What is the gentleman's name," said the andlord. "Douglas," said the secretary.

"There are his rooms," replied the landlord pointing to some half dozen; "they were take or him by the emperor, who also left him this note," handing him a small billet at the same It advised the senator that the emperor was obliged to leave before his arrival, and begged to see him at the review. The senator and his friend proceeded on to the ground, was met by the emperor, and greeted with a most cordial "I understand," says the emperor, "that you have been traveling through my empire."

"I came from Odessa," said Mr. D.
"Then you have been at Constantinople,"

"I have," said the senator. "I understand they are talking about was down there," said Nicholas, jocosely.

"They are so," said D.
"Well," said Nicholas, "do they really think there is to be war ?" "They think, in that matter, very much depends upon yourself," said D.
"O," said the emperor, "I am a man of peace," and the conversation turned upon the duties of the day.

Three hundred and fifty thousand troops. the largest standing army in the world, then passed in review and in open order before the emperor of all the Russias and his distinguished guest, a sight that few Americans ever beheld In the course of the day and the desultory more than once took occasion to say that he considered there was but two proper govern-ments on earth—the one where all the people ruled, and the other where only one ruled—the American and the Russian governments. The other powers were mongrels, and were destined absorbed by one or the other of these "two" governments.

From Russia Mr. D. went to Paris, met Ser ator Jones, of Tennessee, and by invitation of the American Secretary of Legation, was in-yited to see Napoleon. The day fixed, the two senators repaired to the emperor's quarters and found some sixty of his cabinet council and head men of the nation in waiting for an audience. After their arrival the emperor received but two of his own countrymen before sending for the senators. As they marched in to his presence the balance of the guests followed, and with their glittering court dress made a dazzling array of royalty, about the plain clad personages of our senatorial repubicans. The emperor engaged his American visitors in conversation about ten minutes, when he handed them over to his talented and accomplished queen, who entertained them for one hour with a great variety of questions on political matters, and versatility of talent as unexpected as it was unequaled. She dove into the young senators in this wise:

"What do you Americans want of Cuba?"

"Nothing," said Donglas, "only for her to become independent, and then to maintain her sovereignty as against foreign powers."
"Then," said she, "why did you not join with England and France in their proposition to guarantee her independence?"
"Because," said D., "it is an American docWASHINGTON SENTINEL

"Ever since she refused to join the 'Holy Alliance' in putting down one of the greatest men the world ever saw," said D.

This allusion to Napoleon the First silenced the conversation on that subject, and after discussing the most exciting political topics, and fully unveiling the emperor's views on all these subjects, by an ardent and frank expression of her own, the emperor suggested that the conversation should be dropped, and the distingues of the realm, who had been standing all this time, caps in hand, should then have audience.

BRITISH GRATITUDE .- Another instance has lately occurred of the gratitude usually dis-played by English tourists through the United States, in return for the attentions universally shown them by our people. Mr. Thackeray, an English writer of some celebrity, recently traveled through our country, delivering a course eled through our country, delivering a course of lectures upon the writers of a by-gone age. Mr. T. was everywhere received and treated in the most flattering manner. Courtesies and kindnesses were heaped upon him in profusion; in short, everything was done to render his something the state of the second leading to the leading to leading t journ among us an agreeable one. He lec-tures were largely attended; and, when he went back to England, his pockets were much heavier than when he left that country for America. Well, this Mr. T., upon his return to his native country, commenced the publication of a novel entitled "The Newcomes." In the second chapter of this work, the author speaks of an event as happening "when Mr. Washington was heading the American rebels, with a courage worthy of a better cause." This sneer at the memory of our noble forefathers is the sole return that we have received for the kindly atten-tions showered upon Mr. Thackeray while on his recent visit to this country.

We are not, however, astonished at such a display of ingratitude on his part; he has but pursued the usual mode adopted by British travelers through the United States to express their sense of the many favors bestowed upon them. Has he not, in the course which he has followed, the precedents set by the renowned Madam Trollope, the distinguished Captains Hall and Marryatt, and the illustrious cockney Dickens? Could it have been expected that be would disregard the example of predecessors like these, and, dropping their sneering and abusive tone, speak kindly in return for kindness? Oh, no. Such an expectation would have been contrary to the teachings of the same of the sa experience. There have been, to be sure, few instances in which English tourists in America have deviated from the custom of thei class, and, having been treated courteously manifest a proper degree of gratitude therefor But such exceptions are very rare; and M Thackeray, it appears, has determined not tadd himself to the number. We wonder if i never occurred to Mr. T., when he was receiv ing the courtesies of American citizens, and filling his pockets with American gold, that the descendants of those "American rebels" whose cause he adverts to so contemptuously, were displaying a kindliness and a liberality "worthy of a better cause?"—Detroit Free Sanatory View of the Beard and Moustache. Our attention has been frequently directed, ing the beard to grow for the purposes of health. Some have directed our attention to a recent article on the subject which appeared in "Dick-ens' Household Words," and one has been so kind as to send us the said article, cut from one of our cotemporaries, with a few of his own remarks appended, approving of wearing the beard and moustache in all their glory. We have no doubt that the moustache and beard will be universally worn by our people

n the course of four years from the present date; we thus judge from the great number who wear them now, in our city, in comparison with the number who displayed them five years ago. None but foreigners wore them then, now they are worn by one-eighth of our male population.

The masons and millers in the cities of Liverpool, Edinburgh, and Glasgow, have adopted the moustache as a health preservative, and, during the past winter, the engineers and other employees on the Scottish central railroad wore the beard by the recommendation of Dr. Simpson, and have addressed a letter to their super-intendent, describing the benefits they derived from such a habit, and recommended its general adoption by all those in similar occupa Ten minutes of time spent in shaving every day amounts to one hour and ten minutes every week, or nearly 2½ days in one year. If in this city there are 60,000 men who each consume this time yearly in shaving, it amounts in the aggregate to 150,000 days in one year, all of which would be saved by wearing the beard. But then what is to become of barbers and Sheffield razors? There is nothing, we admit, that would so readily reconcile any man to the inconvenience of an upper lip ornament as a bad razor. If the beard conduces to health then it should never be shaved. Clergymen, above all other classes, we believe, would be gainers by wearing the beard, it would be gainers by wearing the beard, it would, in many cases, prevent bronchitis, a disease with which they are peculiarly afflicted; they, however, will be the last to adopt the whisker, as they are so conspicuously shaven and shorn. Among the Anglo-saxon race the beard was uniconsults many in the dame of beard was universally worn in the days of Shakspeare, and even old John Bunyan dis played the moustache. Fashions in dress, and wearing the hair in various modes, revolve in circles, and now the reign of the beard has begun.

SCIENCE AND COMMERCE.—The efforts of Lieutenant Maury to establish a world-wide system of observations on the winds and currents of the ocean, have been appreciated by the merchants and savans of Europe. The convention of scientific men, which met at Brussels, contained accredited representatives from the leading maritime States of the old world. Such an event as a regular and universal system, sanctioned by the leading powers of the civilized world, is an omen of peace to counterbalance the present belligerent attitude of some of those powers. Commerce at last begins to exert a power adequate to check the insane ambition of kings and repress those disorders that have heretofore embroiled mankind n wars to the retardation of their best interests, and wasted whole countries with fire and sword. As Americans we are proud of the merited honors accorded to Lieutenant Maury and his labors.—Wall St. Jour.
